

Replicating Data for Testing Purposes

The Problem

How can tests be run on existing data without subjecting production servers to downtime or the testing itself?

The Solution

Replicator is a valuable tool for running tests on a set of data while maintaining the availability of critical production data. By replicating a set of data from a production server, tests can be performed on the copied data while the original data remains live and available for critical business applications.