

Question

I have a tape library that allows me to map it into multiple logical libraries by allocating a quantity of media storage slots to each drive. This allows me to have two applications on the same computer using the same physical library. Can the jb driver package support this feature of the library?

Answer

Yes it can. In fact, a single jb driver package can handle the communications between each application and its logical library.